Giancarlo Corsetti

(Ph.D. Yale 1992) is professor of Economics at the University of Rome III. He has taught at the University of Rome, Columbia, Yale and Bologna. His main field of interest is international economics.

His main contributions to the field include a tractable general equilibrium model of international transmission for the analysis of optimal monetary policy; a study of the European currency turmoil in 1992–93; a theoretical inquiry in the fiscal and financial roots of exchange rate instability; a model of the role of large players in currency and financial crises; and a widely-quoted analysis of the currency and financial crises in South East Asia, as well as an analysis of empirical tests of contagion versus interdependence. On EMU-related issues, he has contributed with a critique of the Treaty of Maastricht and an analysis of the launch of the euro, disentangling market expectations of growth differentials with the US as a driving factor of the euro-dollar exchange rate. He is the editor of the euro homepage, a popular web site tracking euro-related studies and news since 1999. Among his affiliations, in addition to being a member of the CESifo European Economic Advisory Group, he is consultant to the Bank of Italy, visiting professor at Yale University and at the New York Fed, and CEPR and CESifo research fellow.
